

MIMA BONE

ARTS EDUCATION BLOGGER

CONTACT

07968 313239
admin@felt-tip-pen.com
www.felt-tip-pen.com

PROFILE

A passionate blogger and educator in the arts with 18 years' experience working in schools and across cultural institutions.

BIOGRAPHY

Mima set-up felt-tip-pen.com in 2017 to produce and share educational resources to meet the needs of Art & Design teachers UK and worldwide.

As well as practical visual arts, she has a strong background and interest in Art History; graduating from the Courtauld Institute of Art in 1999. Her knowledge, understanding and appreciation of both art & design have been further enabled by the breadth of her experience, working for numerous institutions including the Ashmolean Museum, Geffrye Museum, the Arts Council, and the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment.

Mima has worked as a teacher and Head of Art & Design across schools in London. Her work as Head of Department at Clapton Girls' Academy received recognition from the HMI chief inspector for Art and Design.

Throughout her career, Mima has found opportunities to network and build link between schools and institutions, and has successfully carried out projects with many cultural organisations including Tate, the British Council, International Institute of Visual Arts, Whitechapel Gallery, Barbican Gallery, and The Royal College of Art.

In addition, Mima has contributed to wider aspects of Art and Design education; sitting on the steering committee for the Art & Design PGCE at the Institute of Education for four years, serving one year on the council for the NSEAD (National Society for Education in Art and Design), and participating in the Coordinating and Communication Cultural Education consultation for the London Mayor's Office as part of a Cultural Strategy review.